form still has to be determined; 4) Format: First section with four theoretical and one practical medium-length essay questions (i.e. questions to develop), around 300 to 400 words per answer; objective: application of acquired knowledge. Second section with multiple-choice questions. Students may use all teaching material. 5) Structure: An exam worth 6 points, consisting of 5 theoretical questions of which students have to choose 4, 1 practical question and 10 multiple-choice questions. Each theoretical question is worth 1 point; the practical question is worth 1 point; and the 10 multiple-choice questions all together are worth 1 point (0.1 point per question). The score for the Continuous Assessment (max. 4 points) will be added to the mark obtained for the exam.

EXTRAORDINARY CALL

The final exam will be held on-line. This is outlined in more detail below:

1) Date: Exam on 16 June 2020, at 11.30 am., as is indicated in the timetable. 2) Time allowed: 3 hours, until 2.30 pm. (14:30 h.). 3) Development: via Virtual Campus. Specific form still has to be determined. 4) Format: First section with four theoretical and practical one medium-length essay questions (i.e. questions to develop), around 300 to 400 words per answer; objective: application of acquired knowledge. Second section with multiple-choice questions. Students may use all teaching material. 5) structure is twofold:

5a) Students who wish to maintain their Continuous Assessment average. An exam worth 6 points, consisting of 5 theoretical questions of which students have to choose 4, 1 practical question and 10 multiple-choice questions. Each theoretical question is worth 1 point; the practical question is worth 1 point; and the 10 multiple-choice questions all together are worth 1 point (0.1 point per question). The score for the Continuous Assessment (max. 4 points) will be added to the mark obtained for the exam.

5b) Students who do not wish to maintain their Continuous Assessment average. An exam worth 10 points, consisting of 5 theoretical questions of which students have to choose 4, 1 practical question and 10 multiple-choice questions. Each theoretical question is worth 1.5 point; the practical question is worth 2 points; and the 10 multiple-choice questions all together are worth 2 points. The theoretical questions will be the same in both types of exams. The practical questions will be different.
